In the 1950s and 1960s, modern homes were available for families at many income levels. For the remainder of the 20th century, mainstream developers shied away from innovative design and modern homes were, for the most part, only available to the wealthy. We think it is time for a change.

LiveModern is a web-based network that helps connect the public interested in modern housing to a range of providers, including architects, developers, builders, lenders, and realtors, among others. While our goal is to promote modern housing in general, LiveModern looks forward to a future in which modernist housing is widely available and affordable to a majority of homebuyers.

Membership is free and open to anyone who is interested in modernist housing.

Membership includes a free subscription to the LiveModern e-newsletter.
